Day-by-day itinerary and practical notes

After a work stay in San Francisco, I flew to Pittsburgh for a personal two-day trip. My confirmed core cost was $298 for the flight, Airbnb, food, local travel and attractions. A further $50 of shopping brought my actual total to $348.

Prices are historical rather than live quotations. Use them as a budgeting reference and verify current fares, entry fees and booking conditions before travelling.

Is Pittsburgh affordable for a two-day city break?

My core two-day budget was $298, including the flight from San Francisco, Airbnb, meals, local transport and sightseeing. With $50 of personal shopping, the full amount I spent was $348. Travellers already within driving or rail distance could spend less because the flight formed part of my total.
